The Malaysian Journal of Pathology - a new look

Feedback from readers have suggested that the JOURNAL should have a more attractive frontage. After more than a decade of publication, it is perhaps timely to consider a new look. The cover has been redesigned to a more sophisticated appearance. However, the basic blue colour of the Society has been retained, as also a resemblance to the old cover so that the change does not invoke feelings of psychological death of the "old" Journal. Other changes introduced include a more economical size, choice of art paper and type-face of print. These changes are an attempt to improve the JOURNAL, a continual process intended for more effective and pleasant reading. Feedback from readers are invaluable and are always welcome.
